Dear Olivia,

Here at the North Pole the stars are twinkling over the snowy roof of my workshop. I have a great many letters to write before Christmas, but I wanted to take my time over this one, because it is for you.

You are seven years old now and in Year 2. My, how you are growing! I'm sure you learn something new there every single day.

And now for the best news of all. In my Big Book, written in shiny gold ink, it says: Olivia helps her little brother get dressed every morning! When I read that, I smiled so widely that my beard wiggled. I am so proud of you.

I hear you love drawing, football and ballet. How wonderful! The elves wanted to know all about it.

Please give your brother Alfie a big Christmas hug from me.

Thank you for your wish list! I read it twice by the fire, and it is now tucked safely inside the Big Book. Christmas Eve is nearly here. The sleigh is polished, the reindeer are practising their flying, and I am already looking forward to a mince pie on my long journey (and a crunchy carrot for the reindeer).

Wishing you a magical Christmas,
With love from the North Pole,

Father Christmas

P.S. from Pip the elf: Father Christmas told me you're quite the artist! A drawing of the sleigh would look lovely on the workshop wall.
